

Using the NZC resource bank

	Key resources	Supporting materials	Digital stories
Vision, values and principles
Key competencies
English
The arts
Health and physical education
Learning languages
Mathematics and statistics
Science
Social sciences
Technology
Effective pedagogy
School curriculum design and review
Literacy and numeracy
Community consultation

New resources recently added

The NZC resource bank (NZCRB) is where all the resources on the site are housed.

The resources are sorted into collections and then are further sorted into three categories, key resources; supporting materials; and digital stories.

A cross indicates that a new resource has been added to a collection.

Click on the folder icon to enter the resource bank.

Once you enter the resource bank you can see all of the resources in the category you have selected. To see more of the resources in the same collection you can navigate using the category menu at the top of the page.

Key competencies

Key resources

▶ Supporting materials

Digital stories

← Back to matrix

Each entry in the resource bank tells you what type of resource it is, if it is a download, and how large the file is. You can also see at a glance by the icons if it is a Ministry of Education resource, or newly added. All newly added resources appear at the top of the list.

READING
NEW GENERAL

Key competencies and the arts in the New Zealand curriculum \(Word 88KB\)

This paper written by Dr Peter O'Connor and Merryn Dunmill for the Ministry of Education addresses the relationship between learning in the Arts and the development of the key competencies.

<http://nzcurriculum.tki.org.nz/content/download/509/3834/file/rzcmp...>

You have the opportunity to participate in this section of the site by suggesting resources and submitting comments. These are sent to the site organiser via email.

Participate

We are interested in your suggestions and comments.

Suggest a link

Your comments